Sorting cherries in East Java

East Java, Indonesia

With more than 17,000 islands, Indonesia is a diverse country with many languages and cultures. The island of Java has been producing coffee since the late 1600's. PTP Nusantara XII is the government estate enterprise that oversees production of coffee in many estates in East Java, including Jampit, Pancur, Kayumas, Pasewaran and Blawan. The area in which these estates are located is rich with volcanic soil, and ideal weather conditions. Blawan Estate is the largest producing estate and employs many workers during harvest, which includes housing, clinics, schools, and sports facilities. Java has established itself as a critical part of the specialty coffee industry and is a key component to many well-known blends. The cup offers rich flavor with notes of tobacco, melon, spice, cocoa and earth. These flavors play together well with heavy body and a buttery finish.
