Barboza on his farm

Gracias a Dios, Utcubamba Province

Mr. Barboza has been a member of the El Palto co-op since its inception in 2003, and has a farm that spans 4 hectares in the town of Gracias a Dios within the Lonya Grande district in the Utcubamba Province. He's completed classes in management, sustainable production techniques and works closely with the president of the co-op to apply his studies to benefit the group. El Palto co-op produces certified Organic and Fair Trade coffee. They have invested a portion of their premium to renovate their crops and convert their members to organic methods that work to conserve the rainforest.

Through a joint partnership with our friends at Ecotierra, Atlantic Specialty Coffee has offset 6 tons of CO2 emissions related to the transport of select Microlots from El Palto. The verified carbon credits are generated from a forest preservation project developed by Peruvian based Bosques Amazonicos del Peru (BAM) and aims at reducing emissions from deforestation and degradation of virgin rainforest in southeastern Peru.
